After the Advance.

The old traditions of warfare are not yet so remote that we can easily focus our imagination to suit the new tactics. We find it difficult to avoid altogether a sense that we can easily focus our imagination to suit the new tactics. We have frequently from the first plies of sea fish which could be obtained. There need be no diminution in eather in the first plies of sea fish which could be obtained. imagination to suit the new tactics. We find it difficult to avoid altogether a sense of anticlimax when the news of a clean-cut success is followed by some variant of the formula that "there is nothing of importance to report." That is the position to day. Sir Douglas Haig's reports of yesterday record no further advance of importance. We say that in such a position it is difficult to avoid a sense of anticlimax; but, in fact, there is no matter for surprise or disappointment in the almost complete pause which applies, have "hitten off more than there is no matter for surprise or disappointment in the almost complete pause which has succeeded the attack of Tuesday. The break in the weather and the torrential rains which are lashing the low-lying plain of Flanders do not explain it. The bad weather is, indeed, to be regretted; but it is to be regretted first because, as Sir Douglas Haig's second report shows, it makes the sodden ground less easy to consolidate against counter-attacks, and next because it must delay the bringing up of the guns and the other preparations for the next stage in the advance, not because it has stopped the present advance. That advance has stopped because it was intended by the Commander-in-Chief that it should stop, and it has stopped precisely at the point where it was designed to stop. Parties of troops which somewhat outran the fixed objectives and established posts further afield, we are even informed by a correspondent at General Headquarters, have ticld, we are even informed by a cor-respondent at General Headquarters, have seen withdrawn. The great offensive in its present stage, in short, is proceeding ecording to a new tactic. Of that new may be well satisfied with the success achieved in such circumstances in this intricate country. It proves once more that no German positions can withstand our assault. The facts are more eloquent than the bombastic language of the Kaiser's proclamation on the third anniversary of his declaration of war on Russia. Tuesday's victory makes a fitting and hopeful end of the third year of Germany's war.

the food supply in the United Kingdom. He has authorised the Board of Agriculture in England and Wales, and the Department of Agriculture in Ireland, to grant powers with a view, in particular, to greater catches of fish. The Irish Order enables the Department to make orders extending the open season for netting for salmon during the present year. It also extends from 8 p.m. to 9.25 p.m. the time up to which nets may be used in fresh water during the season of this year. The extension of the open season does not apply to certain districts. It should also be pointed out, in view of the misleading phrasing in certain preliminary notices, that no new public right is created for taking salmon and sea trout. There is taking salmon and sea trout. There is taking salmon and sea trout. There is the most by wmoth an exact statement of tonnage statistics.

taking salmon and sea trout. There is nothing very startling in the Order for Ireland except that any increase in catches of the choicer fresh water fish will be welcomed. At the same time it is distressing to hear that there is a continued decline in the fisheries of certain districts, notably the Shannon. The Limerick Fishery Congervators have just held a meeting at which it was suggested that the sixteen Irish counties which the Board represents should, through their County Councils, he asked to impose an extra half-small charge inside they burst into flame, which scatters in all directions and burns all in the vicinity. It seems that in fright-fulness our experts can easily beat the Germans if they desire, and the enemy must now deeply regret having made use of so many illegal weapons of warfare.

Lord Duncannon, who first called attention to the Henderson-Macdonald incident, moved the adjournment this afternoon, and as his notice of motion was more judiciously, worded than Mr. Hogge's abortive attempt yesterday, and attached responsibility to the War Cabinet and not to Mr. Henderson personally, the Speaker accepted it, remarking drily that the noble lord had put the saddle on the right horse. Nearly all the Unionists present and a few Liberals stood up in support of it.

Mr. Rooney raised the ingenious objection that, as Mr. Henderson's position in the Ministry was still uncertain, and would remain so until the Ministry Reconstruction Bill was passed, it would not be permissible for him to come down to the House to defend himself; but the Speaker ruled that that was a question for the Law Courts, not for him.

The cheers were unusually faint when Mr. Churchill, escorted by his cousin, Captain Guest, and by Mr. J. W. Hills, the Unionist member for Durham, moved up the floor to take the oath and his seat. The new Minister of Munitions has some uphill work before him before he can receive the confidence of the House.

MILITARISM.

M. Andre Tudesq, the special correspondent of the Journal on the Flanders front, says:—The fire has spread to Lens. A terrific cannonade has wiped out the last of the mining villages. On both banks of the River Souches fresh armies are proceeding to the attack. We are fighting to-day the most momentous battle of these three years of war. It is the most colossal collision ever recorded in history. 'CLARENDO' is pure cooked cereals and beans only, scientifically blended, in big bulky golden flakes.

Nothing is extracted from the grain and nothing added. It contains no spice or other irritant.

Horses get into the pink of condition more speedily on "Clarendo" than on any other food.

By its use Cattle, Sheep, and Pigs are made ready for the market sooner, Dairy Cows yield more and richer milk, and Poultry fatten more quickly and lay better.

"Clarendo" is the scientific way to bigger profits and earlier marketing maturity in all classes of live stock.

As Lord Crawford, himself an experienced agriculturist, said in the House of Lords, "the present price of cattle food will undoubtedly bring home to the farmer the desirability of scientific feeding."
